Osaka 'Solid Sea of Flames' After B-29 Raid

FIVE SQUARE MILES OF TOWN REPORTED RAZED

More Than 300 Superforts Convert Center Of City Into Holocaust

WAR PLANTS POUNDED

Total Of 24 Square Miles Of Nips' Three Largest Cities Leveled

By United Press A solid sea of flame visible 125 miles away burned out five square miles of Osaka, Japan's biggest war production center, today in the third great Superfortress raid in five days on the enemy homeland.

A 21st bomber command announcement also increased the areas leveled in the two previous mammoth fire raids to 17 square miles in Tokyo and two square miles in Nagoya.

That made a grand total of 24 square miles of Japan's three largest cities destroyed in the past 96 hours—an area greater than all New York's Manhattan Island or Jersey City.

400 Tons An Hour In the latest attack, more than 300 superfortresses converted the center of Osaka, second largest city in Japan, into a holocaust with more than 2,300 tons of fire bombs. Bombs rained down at the rate of 400 tons an hour for three hours in the pre-dawn darkness.

The flames enveloped war plants turning out guns, tanks, explosives and other vital weapons, as well as business blocks, city buildings and thousands of flimsy dwellings. Ninety percent of buildings in the 10-square-mile target area were of wood and plaster construction.

The whole damned town seemed to be burning up," said Lt. Joseph R. Carroll, Jacksonville, Fla. "It was like a huge pit of fire. The flames appeared to be solid and steadily rising."

Fires Seem Closer "The fires seemed a lot closer together than Nagoya," reported Tall Gunner Cpl. William G. Reed of Long Beach, Calif. "On our way out, we saw some really terrific flames."

Brig. Gen. Thomas S. Power of Ft. Worth, Tex. commander of the Gom-based contingent, also said the fires were "very concentrated."

"Men in an observation plane got the impression of a solid mass of flames," he said.

A Japanese communiqué acknowledged that some fires still were out of control 10 hours after the start of the raid. It said the B-29s bombed blindly from above clouds and damaged "various places in the city area."

Coal Operators Predict John Lewis 'Won't Like' Reply To Wage Demands

WASHINGTON, March 14—A spokesman for the nation's soft coal producers predicted today that John L. Lewis "won't like" their answer to his 18 new contract demands for his United Mine Workers.

He declined to reveal the nature of the operators' reply. But he said it could be assumed that it would be presented to Lewis when joint contract negotiations were resumed today. The present contract expires in 17 days.

The question of a wartime strike in the soft coal fields is linked directly with Lewis' reaction to the operators' stand on his demand for a 10 cents a ton royalty and other (Continued on Page Two)

WMC RULES OUT WORKING SPREE BY JAMAICANS

PASSAIC, N. J., March 14—Twenty-one Jamaicans were back on the beam today after a work spree that had War Manpower Commission officials puzzled for three weeks.

The Jamaicans, part of a group of 35 brought here from the British West Indies to work in a box factory, suddenly began reporting for work with drooping eyelids and sagging shoulders.

Foreman at the Garfield factory said they couldn't understand it. The men had worked eagerly when they first arrived. They called in the WMC.

The WMC found the Jamaicans suffering from work hangovers. After finishing their day tricks at the Garfield plant, they trekked across the Passaic river and worked the night shift at a Clifton paper plant.

WMC officials told the workers their industry was highly praiseworthy—but one job a day was enough.

FAIL TO AGREE

WASHINGTON, March 14—Coal producers have failed to agree among themselves on a complete reply to the United Mine Workers' 18 new contract demands, it was disclosed today.

The producers' answer was to have been presented to John L. Lewis and other UMW negotiators today. But in a three-day meeting which ended a little after midnight, the operators could not achieve unanimity on various issues. Some were willing to go further than others, it was said, toward meeting some of the union demands.

United States To Back Policy of International Trusteeships At Meeting

The system generally was considered a failure. Iraq was the only country between the wars to be granted independence under the system. Many of the areas became for all practical purposes colonies of the nation holding the mandate.

When the new world organization is formed, the mandate system must either be transferred to the new organization or completely reorganized. Instead of continuing mandates to one specific country, the thinking now is leaning toward possibly a committee of several countries that would form a trusteeship over dependent areas until the latter were ready for independence.

The question of old league mandates and dependent areas was part of the unfinished business at Dumbarton Oaks. The Big Three agreed at Yalta upon the idea of giving the right to a new world organization to grant international trusteeships, but also agreed to consult on the problem before the San Francisco conference and to arrange the details at that meeting next month.

(Continued from Page One) stiff anti-aircraft fire and a blinding network of searchlights, but fighter opposition was meager. Only one plane was lost to enemy action. Another was lost over Nagoya Monday and two went down over Tokyo Saturday.

Three planes landed on newly-captured airstrips on Iwo Jima, 750 miles south of Tokyo, en route home from the three raids, the 21st bomber command reported.

Third Major Step

The Osaka raid marked the third major step in the command's announced campaign to destroy Japan's industrial cities and thus strike a body-blow to the enemy's war-making potential.

Osaka, 245 miles west of Tokyo and 80 miles west of Nagoya, has 3,250,000 inhabitants, 600,000 of them in the 10-square-mile target area of the B-29s. It is the most densely-populated city in Japan.

Osaka's 52,000 factories turn out ships, tanks, planes, guns, explosives, chemicals and textile products. One third of the city was destroyed by fire in 1909 and it still contains many wooden houses and buildings.

Among the 3,500 airmen who bombed Osaka were many who also had participated in the Nagoya and Tokyo strikes. When they landed at their Marianas bases today, they had completed 48 hours in the air out of the last 110.

Gain On Mindanao

Tank-paced American troops swept up four more villages on Mindanao and stabbed more than two miles inland from Zamboanga today against increasing Jap resistance.

At the same time other American forces stepped up their campaign on Luzon. They cut the main Japanese line east of Manila, cleared the entire western shore of Laguna bay and re-opened Batangas bay to U. S. shipping.

The mounting ground offensives on Luzon and Mindanao, largest strongholds of the Japanese in the Philippines, came as American bombers opened a campaign to neutralize the 150-mile long Sulu archipelago stretching from Mindanao to oil-rich Borneo. Liberators began the attacks with a 55-ton raid on Sanga Sanga and Zettal airfields near the southern end of the island chain.

Veteran fighters of the 41st Division fought behind tanks against Japanese machine-gun and mortar fire to expand the beachhead around Zamboanga at the southwestern tip of Mindanao, second largest island in the Philippines.

A cluster of four more villages—Candalar, Sinonog, Pitogo and Santa Maria—were seized just north of Zamboanga and the troops last were reported more than two miles beyond the city.

Iwo Finish Nears

Three Marine divisions were mopping up Japanese remnants on Iwo today. The end of the campaign was at hand.

Other units landed unopposed on Kama and Kaang rocks west of Iwo to knock out emplacements from which the Japanese had been shelling and mortaring American positions throughout the 24-day battle.

Only two major enemy pockets remained on Iwo, and both gradually were being whittled down. The Japanese had lost all their artillery, but still were fighting back with small arms, machine-guns and mortars.

There also was speculation on the idea that the operators may offer Lewis a contract for the duration of the war in Europe which would incorporate some of his demands. Lewis asked that the new contract be subject to termination on 20 days notice by either party. In the past, contracts have run two years.

The operators drafted their reply during almost continuous sessions since their last meeting with UMW representatives last Saturday.

Several reasons were given for the possibility of government seizure of the mines prior to the strike vote, which is expected to be overwhelmingly in favor of an interruption of work. Seizure would assure uninterrupted coal production. It would eliminate the uncertainty which accompanies the "war of nerves" when the UMW and operators go into the last few days of the current contract with no new agreement in sight.

It would also eliminate a possible court test of the National Labor Relations Board right to conduct the poll. Edward R. Burke, president of the Southern Coal Producers association, has delayed but not abandoned his intention to petition the federal courts to stay the vote.

The NLRB, War Labor Board and labor department turned down his request to dismiss Lewis' strike vote notice.

Fuel Administrator Harold L. Ickes, who took over the mines to end the 1943 coal strikes, was scheduled to meet today in closed session with his advisory council, which includes representatives of the operators and the UMW. Government policy in the event of a threatened work stoppage may be discussed.

The First Army's Remagen bridgehead was reported in censored field dispatches to be 11 miles long and at least six wide at some points. German broadcasts indicated it was larger.

GRANGERS HUSK 220 SHOCKS OF CORN FOR LEIST

Two hundred and twenty shocks of corn were husked Tuesday at the farm of Ottis Leist, Pickaway township, by members of the Log Elm grange together with neighbors and friends. The 'husking bee' was planned to assist Mr. Leist, who has been ill for some time.

The man came early to the Leist farm, each carrying his own lunch. All of the husked corn was cribbed and much of the fodder was hauled to the barnlot.

Those assisting in the friendly act were: Roger Jury, Clarence Dunn, Clyde Eaken, Turney Pontious, Luther Wilson, Fred Dudson, Harold Alkire, Russell England, Willard England, Lloyd Lutz, Pryor T. Harmont, Ralph Head, Sam Pontious, Frank Graves, Harry Sharrett, Ernest Dozer, Charles Baldosser, Clarence Maxson, Edward Kreisel, Elmer Dodd, Raymond Welch, John Woldorf, Ralph May and David Gillemwater.

The recommended bill was considered a partial victory for organized labor which had demanded that "teeth" be put in the law to prevent unscrupulous employers from taking advantage of the relaxation of controls on women's and children's working hours.

Under the old act, the state health director first had to certify that the longer hours were injurious to the health of the women employed before the industrial relations chief could order the employer to reduce working hours to 50 hours a week.

The recommended bill was considered a partial victory for organized labor which had demanded that "teeth" be put in the law to prevent unscrupulous employers from taking advantage of the relaxation of controls on women's and children's working hours.

Labor leaders were expected to make another effort to establish a 48-hour work week for women and a 40 or 44-hour work week for children when the measure reaches the floor of the house.

Bramham, head of the minor leagues, said he would not approve applications of new leagues and would discourage restoration of suspended leagues to active status until manpower and transportation shortages are relieved.

HITLER'S LEGACY

AS the greatest of wars grinds to its end, a wild statements attributed to Hitler in a speech delivered on February 24 seem more plausible than when they were uttered. He cannot do everything he threatened, but he can come so near it that his name will be remembered with loathing and hatred for a hundred or even a thousand years.

In the speech referred to, he talked of revenging the loss of the war by leaving the whole country a wreck. He was so bitter that he called himself a victim of "the biggest treason in history," and said he intended "to leave only ruins, rats and epidemics to the Bolsheviks, Jews and plutocrats." He named the infamous Gestapo leader, Heinrich Himmler, as his "special commissioner of destruction" of German cities and industries, and threatened to use the German air force against his own people.

Whether he really meant it or not, things in the German Reich seem to be shaping up somewhat in the manner he described. It will be a fitting end for the most crazy and villainous system of life and government ever undertaken by men professing to be civilized and sane. But he can be thanked for two things. He kept his promises—or tried to—and thereby showed the civilized world what to avoid for the next thousand years.

INDIAN OUTLOOK

THE Indians are picking up. John Collier, who has just resigned after 11 years as U. S. Commissioner of Indian Affairs, reports that the legislation of the last few years, which has given the Indians control of their own affairs, has brought their income up 300 per cent, and their death rate down from 28 (the 1928 figure) to 13.5 per thousand. Since 1900 their population has increased from 237,000 to 377,000.

While the Indians are not likely ever to be very numerous, they are a picturesque element of the community, and may become valuable citizens. They have suffered so much from the white man in the past that they deserve a square deal now.

POOR A DRIVERS

THE A drivers are definitely out of luck. They have always had just enough gasoline to keep the battery alive, and now it is announced that they cannot hope for tires. This has long been the informal rule of many ration boards, but now it is established as a government policy.

It looks as if the highways would get emptier and emptier. He will not only be a lucky man who is able to keep his car running, but who exercises the greatest care in operation.

If Philadelphia is still what she used to be, there should be a big run on "Philadelphia Lawyers" to explain the Atlantic Charter and problems connected with it.

UP AND DOWN BROADWAY

By JACK GAVER
(Subbing for Mallon)

NEW YORK, March 14—Miss Alice Marie Casey of Parsons, Kansas, is spending the week in this city with friends.

To elaborate, Miss Casey is in the throes of having a wonderful time. She is being interviewed, photographed and dined; going to night clubs and the theatre, and appearing on the radio. All because she was chosen as the country's most typical canteen hostess.

She was on the radio show Blind Date, in which girls on the program get exactly that with service men. Her partner turned out to be Seaman Joe Daly of Upper Darby, Pa. With other couples from the show and chaperoned by Morton Downey, they went to the Stork club after the broadcast. Robert Walker, the latest screen hearthdog, was one of the celebs who dropped over to greet the 19-year-old, blonde beauty from Parsons. The party stayed around to help Proprietor Billingsley put up the midnight shutters. Miss Casey repaired immediately to her hotel suite to rest for a strenuous round today.

I told Miss Casey that it was too bad she hadn't been able to come to New York a few weeks ago when there really was some night life to see. She said it didn't matter because a night club open at any hour of the day or night would be a treat to her since there are none at all in Parsons. Kansas is a dry state, she reminded. As an afterthought she added that Parsons wasn't far from Missouri.

Miss Casey is the winner of the second annual contest among canteen workers. Service men picked their favorites in some 200 USO canteens around the country and photographs of these and questionnaires they filled out were sent to New York for selection of winners by a board of experts. The runnerup was Dotty J. Lincoln, Louisville, Ky. Mona Montara, San Francisco, placed third.

The official title for which they competed is "Most Typical Donutee." There just possibly might be a commercial tieup there some place if one searched for it. Anyway the trip is a nice reward for a lucky one among a hard-working group of the nation's girls.

Frank Sinatra slipped into town Monday without registering on the seismograph at Fordham university. He beat the fan rap by skipping the train in Jersey. The crooner brought his radio show personnel with him at his own expense and will quarter here for a month or so while he entertains in hospitals and carries out a long-planned project of talking to the kids in junior and senior high schools about tolerance and what they can make out of the future.

These school dates and the subjects are being arranged in association with Parent-Teachers organizations here and in Boston, Philadelphia, Washington and Chicago. No speeches. Frank says he's just going to talk. He'll address the world youth week rally in Carnegie Hall here March 21. The first school date will be here next Monday or Tuesday. Toward the end of April the 4-F singer expects to go abroad to entertain troops.

Pickaway Junior Class Play

The Junior class of Pickaway township high school will present Friday, March 16, for the annual production, "Oh, Promise Me!" the new three-act stage farce by Pete Williams. This brand new comedy hit, which only recently was made available for national presentation, has been one of the outstanding laugh successes of the year wherever it has been shown. From all advance indications, "Oh, Promise Me!" bids fair to prove the most successful of them all, and the juniors feel that they are very fortunate in having been able to secure the rights for local presentation at this early date.

The cast includes Jean Sharrett as Barry Hollis, a young millionaire; Wayne Bower as Seth Miller, a lawyer; Jessie Ritchie as Fubar, the butler; June Hildenbrand as Mrs. Sue Hollis, the aunt; Patricia Wolfe, as June Hollis, Barry's young sister; Nancy McGinnis as Kathleen, the cook; Carol Dearth as Ann Furber, a young actress; Rita Rhoades, as Patsie Linden; a dancer; Mary Penn, as Mrs. Linden, her mother; Nancy McGinnis as Gladys Vance, a dream girl; Bob Young as Ralph Sanders, a man with a purpose; and Betty Miller, as Mrs. Jones, a young mother. The play is being directed by Mrs. Lois Cooper.

Music will be furnished by the school orchestra under the direction of Miss Vera Ziegler.

THAT old conundrum about who's got the button is answered several dozen times in this suit, labeled "coster's delight," the whim of a well known designer in approaching the annual fashion furor over navy blue and white. All those white polka dot effects you see on the navy wool jacket sketched here are pearl buttons. They are sewn on with scarlet thread in an even spattering in what is a handsome effect, though novel.

Lining of coat and crepe blouse are also in the flag red.

Mrs. John Clark, of McArthur, is visiting relatives in the Circleville community.

BUSY TEACHER BUILDS HIS OWN SCARCE ITEMS

High School Instructor Is Author, Photographer
In Spare Time

Charles F. Zaenglein has not let the difficulties and shortages brought on by the war stop him from giving vocational classes at Circleville high school the best that modern teaching methods can provide. He has usually been able to make a suitable handmade substitute for some article that can no longer be purchased.

An example of this unusual teacher's ability to provide for his classes' needs was shown when a majority of a manual training class elected to build hall trees for a term project. Mr. Zaenglein started them off with the plans and the lumber and wrote to a wholesaler who makes the metal hooks that are fastened by screws onto the trees. The wholesaler wrote back explaining that he would not, because of the war, be able to provide them. The class was disappointed that they would have to give up the project but they had not counted on Mr. Zaenglein's ingenuity. He told the class to keep right on with their project and he would have the hooks for them when they finished. He is having them made in the metal work shop of the high school.

Here 28 Years

Mr. Zaenglein is a mild mannered, and at times a little shy, individual. He has been teaching here in Circleville for 28 years. He came here as a manual training teacher. He has assumed the responsibilities of the band and the orchestra. He used to lead the band back home in Wapakoneta, Ohio, when they had band concerts in the city pavilion in the summer. He once was a musician in the theatre orchestra at home.

His favorite hobby is doing the things that are a little more on the difficult side. He enjoys doing things that have been given up by others as being too difficult. Another hobby that keeps him a bit busy is photography. He makes the photographs for the school annual. He develops the pictures in his basement dark room.

One of the pictures that he showed was of the pumpkin that was built for the silver pumpkin show in 1928. The pumpkin was built by the high school manual training class of paper and wood strips. It was eleven feet high and sixteen feet in diameter.

Writes For Magazine

Among the many diverse things that take up most of the time of this man are the articles that he frequently writes for Industrial Arts and Vocational Education, a magazine published for the teachers of those trades.

One of the articles deals with a filing project. It teaches a student skill and accuracy at hand work. It also serves as a precision test in the use of the file. Another article that was accepted for publication dealt with his plans and construction of a furnace for soldering copper. He had designed and built it because he was unable, at the time, to purchase such equipment. The resultant product was such a success that he wrote about it to pass it on to other teachers.

Students Work

His classes are getting a little work on the practical side by working part time over at the Container Corporation for E. W. Ross, maintenance superintendent, doing sheetmetal work, drafting, welding, cabinet work and research work which has been helpful to both the students and the Container Corporation.

Mr. Zaenglein's projects can be seen in almost any room or corner of the school. He has had his classes build the racks that hold the books in the library, stools and benches in the mechanical drawing classes, cabinets in the domestic science room, desks, tables and benches almost anywhere that they have been needed. His class just finished making six tables to be used as desks for the first grade in Franklin school. They made them at one-fifth of what they would have cost from a manufacturing company.

due one benefit—it might set the ulcer back 15 years.

A heavy theatre schedule got started last night with the opening of "Mrs. A. Gift," by Curt Goetz and Dorian Otvos and featuring Goetz and his wife, Valerie Van Martens, well known European players. The plot concerns a very moral professor with 12 children who once turned his kid sister out of their home because she loved unwisely and too well. She dies wealthy and leaves a will that provides considerable heartache for the professor. It develops that through a technicality he was never legally married himself.

WOUNDED MARINES RETURN TO MARIANAS

THEIR PART IN THE BITTER BATTLE for the important island of Iwo Jima, these wounded Leathernecks limp down the gangplank of a hospital ship after being brought to a base in the Marianas from the battlefront for further treatment and a convalescent period.

WASTE FAT IS STILL A VITAL WAR MATERIAL

Pickaway County's 7,746 families can fill an entire day's medicinal needs of 2,905 battlefield casualties if each home will save one tablespoon of waste kitchen fat, it was estimated today by the nation's largest single collector of this vital war material.

"There are few direct ways a wife, mother or daughter can help safeguard the life of a loved one at the fighting front, and salvaging used fats is one of them," said T. A. Connors, head of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company's national meat department. "The value of the 9,128,000 pounds salvaged by our customers throughout the nation last year is evident in the fact that a single pound of fat will process about 260 quarts of life-giving blood plasma."

The increased tempo of the war has intensified the need for drugs, ointments and acids to ease pain and lessen mortality among our soldiers as well as for synthetic rubber, protective coatings and other vital war materials in which waste fats figure, Connors pointed out. Further, he said, the OPA has continued its offer of red points for each pound of grease turned in at stores.
